WEDNESDAY MORNING, AUG. 11, 1875.

THE FINANCIAL QUESTION.

One, and we might say the principal question now agitating the public mind in America, is that of our national finances, and the number of theories presented is as great as the variety of circumstances which surround men in different localities. Political parties are also, in a great measure, actuated in their utterances and set forth their creeds in platforms fashioned by the same influence. A party in those States where the want of more currency to keep the wheels of commerce in motion and to stimulate the various branches of industry is felt, declares for paper money because the amount of that kind of capital depends only on the inclination of the government to issue it; while in those States where the effects of an irredeemable currency have been seen to be "evil and only evil, and that continually," the same party proclaims itself unalterably opposed to any further issues of paper money and a speedy return to specie payments in all transactions by the general government. This state of things shows that the question of finance is not a political one, as applied to parties now, so-called. The political parties take their positions on this question as public opinion, that "monarch, which sits on no precarious throne, nor borrows leave to be," demands, and Democracy can be just as democratic on a greenback platform as on one whose chief plank is specie payments now and everywhere.

The whole question of the currency and money, arises from the necessity of trade or exchanges among men, in the products of their industry; and the causes and methods that make these exchanges fair, just and beneficial to all concerned, are a means of tyranny and injustice, and an occasion for the exercise of greed and selfishness. When a community has passed that point in their commercial relations that simple barter is not a sufficient means of exchange, a more rapid method is sought for. The first thing selected for this purpose, is a concentrated and valuable form of labor, the most portable, durable and susceptible of carrying on its very face, the record and sign of its value. Such is gold and silver money. Its value is two-fold; it is both intrinsic and representative. But it is its representative value that makes it money, or a conventional sign and record of exchanges. So far as its intrinsic value is concerned, the exchange of a piece of gold for anything else, is simple barter. But it holds the "balance," even, and it gives a just weight for whatever is exchanged for it, because, it has cost labor to produce it.

But there comes a time, in the complex and numerous exchanges that take place between men in a higher state of civilization, when even the barter of gold and silver for other products, concentrated and portable as is their intrinsic value, becomes too cumbrous a method and too slow to effect these exchanges fast enough, and to keep the record of them in the most convenient shape. For this purpose the intrinsic value of the means of exchange is superseded entirely by the representative. The record is taken for a time, for the transaction itself, which, however, is assumed will take place, infallibly; and in order to secure a real result of the exchange of values, which at first are the subject of promise and record merely, there must be some real or assumed ability on the part of the one who makes the promise that he can and will make that promise good. This is the origin of paper money. The value of this paper money, although not intrinsic, is as that of gold and silver, yet is no less real, provided the exchange of values it is used to record can in any way be made certain; it must hold an "even balance" And be sure to give a just weight in the end. The paper money is always representative of value and a mere sign of a real exchange of values to take place at some future time. It may hence be falsified or trusted blindly, on insufficient grounds. This is the secret of panics, revulsions in business and prostration of credits. The lie comes to the surface sooner or later, and the credulous find themselves in the snare.

This liability increases in proportion to the want of integrity and commercial intelligence in individuals and communities where such methods of exchange take place. Individuals are less to be trusted with such a vast interest as the power of making paper money than are corporate bodies of men, and these in turn are less to be trusted than well organized governments. Governments themselves differ very much in this respect, in proportion as they are responsible to the people and easily held in check, or rectified by the demands of public interest. Hence, a true republican government is the safest agency in the world to entrust with the power of making paper money.

An eminent financier of New York has recently issued a pamphlet upon the subject of the currency of this country, in which he claims that at present we have too much paper money and not enough gold, and that the only policy the government could adopt to influence the influx of gold into this country, and keep its relations on a par with other commodities and with the paper currency, would be that the government should require its import duties to be paid in legal tenders, adding always the premium on gold to the amount as estimated in the paper currency. He further argues with much plausibility that this would have a tendency to keep the paper on a par with gold; for, it will make it easier to pay the dues of the government; besides, the superior convenience and certain convertibility of the paper, will always have a tendency to keep it on a par, or even make it more valuable than gold. But interest-bearing bonds are purely a subject of legal enactment, and hence can be controlled by the government. This is the whole secret of the difficulty, and the real key to our financial condition. Our currency, in point of fact, is not convertible into gold. When it is not needed as at present, to the full extent of its volume to effect the exchanges or pay the wages of labor, because these are in a measure interrupted, what is to be done with it? Some say, "call it in and burn it up," that the rest may be worth its own volume in gold. But this currency has already been in circulation; it is now the measure of the whole property of the country, and has been the measure of many exchanges, and now represents the great mass of indebtedness. To bring down its relative value to that of gold is as arbitrary a measure as to bring it to the standard of any other product—that of wheat or iron, for instance.

Though in many of the States a majority of the people are in favor of hard money, and this is perhaps the case with three-fourths of the people of Oregon, yet it is not at all clear that the system can be adopted by the government without a serious embarrassment of nearly all commercial interests if not an factual panic in all our financial affairs.

The very fact that opinions on this question differ so widely, entirely varying ones being held by members of the same political faith, is an indication that the country is yet scarcely ready for a revolution on the subject. More, much more, is the dependence of our people to be placed in the general development of our splendid resources than in the innovation to be made upon the settled policy of the government in its financial concerns. The tide of emigration during the current year will be rather turned against than toward us, and it should be drawn hither again. We can do this, as in the past, by continuing to offer a better reward for labor, and cheaper land for settlement, by a faithful administration of our laws in the interests of the people, and not of classes or monopolies. We must not place ourselves in a position where we may be compelled to submit tamely to that war of commerce which every nation is willing to make upon us, but must take effectual means for our own national preservation.

WANT A CANAL.

The people of Shoalwater Bay having ascertained that it would require but a small outlay of capital to construct a canal from deep water in their bay to the same in Baker's Bay, opposite Astoria, are quite unanimous in their desire to secure the inauguration of the work, and will endeavor, through the delegate in Congress from Washington Territory, to obtain aid for the purpose the coming winter. A preliminary survey of the line shows that a canal six miles in length would connect the two bays, and that the deepest cut down to a sea level would not be over ten feet. The project appears entirely feasible, and the necessary outlay would not be enormous, but the question of the profitableness of an investment in that direction might be one on which capitalists would hesitate. It would avoid the bar of the Columbia and shorten the sea travel to Puget Sound about 40 miles, and render a splendid summer resort easy of access to the people of Oregon.

OUTLOOK FOR WHEAT.

The latest advices reaching us both by mail and telegraph from the great grain centers of the world, indicate an active demand at good prices for all the surplus breadstuffs of the Pacific coast. The advance in the Liverpool market which began in July, but received a check about the 1st of August, seems to have again been renewed, and the last quotations are the highest given for more than a year past. Under these circumstances Oregon is peculiarly fortunate in having a larger crop than ever before, and the farmers stand a more excellent chance of realizing the advantages of full rates in the foreign markets than ever before. Inland transportation is full as low and the facilities better than they were last year, while the ocean tonnage supply promises now to be full at low rates. It is not now claimed by any observing person that shippers realized anything like a large profit in the business during the past year. The high freights at which most of the vessels loading in our State were chartered, and the low prices at which the English markets stood during a great part of the season, effectually precluded the realization of margins by exporters, and especially so as the grain bought here early in the season of 1874, at high rates, and shipped on high-cost vessels, had to compete in the Liverpool market with that bought later in the season at the low figure of $135@1 40 per cental, and exported in vessels chartered at £2 10s@£3. Neither did the farmers at the low rates which ruled a greater part of the past year, more than save themselves in the matter of producing and marketing. These things will all be materially changed this year. The tonnage will not be chartered extensively prior to arrival, and the many ships coming to the coast, as noticed in our commercial reports from time to time, are coming under orders generally, from their owners, and seeking. In many of the shipping ports of the world, freights are reported dull and cargoes wanted. Ships are property which cannot be allowed to lie idle, and anything like good paying rates will be accepted before the surplus tonnage will be permitted to "rot at the wharves." Even in the matter of sacking, the difference to the farmers of Oregon this year will not be less than $75,000 in their favor, while the present indications are, that for as much wheat and flour as Oregon shipped to all points in the harvest year of 1874-75, she will receive about $1,000,000 more in the ensuing harvest year.

The brief reports which reach us by telegraph from Salem, indicate that the Independent convention is going ahead with the work before it, and that during the day it will probably put a man in the field for Congress.

Sixteen Episcopal parishes in the State of Iowa have formally protested against the confirmation of Rev. Dr. Eccleston as bishop of that diocese.

CITY.

RESIGNATION.—We understand that Mr. E[illegible] will Russell has resigned his position as ma[illegible]ager of the Bank of British Columbia, in consequence of other engagements taking up [illegible] his time and attention. Mr. Russell esta[illegible]lished the bank in Portland in 1865, since which time he has been connected with [illegible] institution in the capacity of manager. [illegible] close attention to the responsibilities of t[illegible] position and shrewd financiering, Mr. Russe[illegible] increased the business and established one [illegible] the leading banks on the northwest coast. T[illegible] the personal management by Mr. Russell [illegible] the affairs of the bank more than to any oth[illegible] circumstance is attributable the unprecedent[illegible] success which has attended the enterprise. [illegible] a thoroughly competent business gentlema[illegible] Mr. Russell has few if any superiors on th[illegible] coast. Mr. Townsend, who has been con[illegible]nected with the bank for some time, has bee[illegible] appointed acting manager. It was with r[illegible] reluctance that Mr. Russell found it necessa[illegible] to sever his relations with the bank, after ha[illegible]ing had the personal control of its affairs f[illegible] thirteen years. Business engagements of [illegible] pressing character alone induced him to te[illegible]der his resignation.

EXCLUDING THE TOWER.—An appropriation was made several weeks ago by the common council for the purpose of enabling the com[illegible]mittee on fire and water, acting in conjunction with the chief engineer, to have certain work done on the tower of the city alarm bell. The principal additions, which were pronounced to be indispensably necessary by the chief engineer, were the putting up of flights of stairs, so that a person could reach the bell at the summit of the tower without danger, and to weather-board the four sides of the tower. In obedience to the instruction given, the committee and chief engineer are expending the appropriation. Stairs have already been constructed, and several carpenters are engaged in planking up the sides. The necessary work will be completed by the last of the present week. It will certainly be a great improvement, besides materially adding to the strength of the tower.

CHILD LOST—FOUND.—A little child aged three years, son of a man named Wilson, who resides in Stephens' addition, East Portland, was missed from its home about dusk on Monday evening. Search was instituted at once by the alarmed parents for the missing child. The neigbors were apprised of the fact and turned out en masse to search for the little truant. After looking high and low for about two hours, and failing to discover any traces of the lost child, the search was abandoned. Just as Mr. Wilson and his wife were entering the house, judge of their joyful surprise on seeing their child crawl out from under the stove where it had been snoozing quietly while the distracted parents and neighbors were searching for its whereabouts supposing it had wandered off into the wood and got lost.

SHOULD BE CUT DOWN.—Standing on the inner edge of the sidewalk on Main street, near Sixth, is a large forked plum tree. At present the tree is loaded with fruit, and the branches droop so low over the sidewalk that they seriously interfere with pedestrians. So low do the branches hang that persons are compelled to stoop in passing to and fro, or go round the tree. We have heard several persons complain of the obstruction, and inquire why it was not removed. Either the branches should be lopped off, or the tree cut down, as the value of the fruit will not compensate for the inconvenience to which the public is put. Who will volunteer to play the role of Washington? Bring forth the hatchet!

MAIDEN TRIP.—Yesterday afternoon the new and handsome steamer Orient, built this season by the O. S. N. Co., made her trial trip. The boat steamed some distance down the river and came up as far as the foot of Stark street, when she turned and went to the boneyard. She ploughed through the water quite handsomely, and from appearances will prove one of the most useful boats which belongs to the company. For a boat of light draught the Orient possesses a good degree of spe

We have heard several persons complain of the obstruction and inquire why it was not removed Either the branches should be lopped off, or the tree cut down, as the value of the fruit will not compensate for the inconvenience to which the public is put Who will volunteer to play the role of Wash Georgington? Bring forth the hatchet!

MAIDEN TRIP.—Yesterday afternoon the new and handsome steamer Orient built this season by the O S N Co, made her trial trip The boat steamed some distance down the river and came up as far as the foot of Stark street, when she turned and went to the boneyard. She ploughed through the water quite handsomely, and from appearances will prove one of the most useful boats which belongs to the company For a boat of light draught the Orient possesses a good degree of speed She was built to ply on the waters of the Willamet and Columbia rivers from Eugene to Astoria, and is admirably adapted to run on that line She is now ready for active service

OUT AGAIN.—It was predicted at the time of the stabbing affray which occurred a week ago last Saturday morning at the Ivy Green saloon, between Johnny Walker and Wm B Taylor that the injuries sustained by the latter would result fatally From the supposed dangerous character of the wounds and the critical condition of Taylor, there appeared to be good reasons for such predictions But the result of the injuries could not have been more favorable. The wounds have healed up with surprising rapidity, and the man is pronounced beyond all danger Yesterday Taylor was out walking about the streets

DEAD.—With sincere regret we announce the death of Mr Daniel F Smith concerning whose severe illness we made mention in Monday's issue. Mr Smith died at his residence last evening after an illness of twenty two days of typhoid pneumonia Deceased was a gentleman who commanded the respect and esteem of a large circle of friends and his death will be generally regretted For several years Mr Smith was a member of the firm of Smith, Champlin & Co, of the Portland Boot and Shoe Factory He leaves a devoted wife to mourn his departure

A BROKEN SHAFT.—While the Oregon Steamship Co s new steamer Bonanza was on her trip up the river on Monday the shaft of the wheel was badly fractured The accident occurred while the boat was in the vicinity of Union Bar, near Fairfield Owing to the accident the Bonanza was obliged to return to the basin at Oregon City for repairs Several weeks delay will probably be unavoidable

NEW ORDNANCE FRAME.—By long exposure the frames to which are attached the heavy ordnance at Fort Stevens have become considerably decayed and unable to resist the tremendous recoil when the guns are discharged Gen Michler gave instructions a few weeks ago to have new timbers substituted, and a number of men are at present engaged in carrying out the orders issued.

TIN WEDDING.—Late Monday evening Mr. and Mrs C A Alisky were serenaded at their residence, the occasion being the tenth anniversary of their wedding A general good time was had, when the visitors were afterward invited to partake, &c The affair was impromptu Several articles wrought from tin were presented by a few friends to the host and hostess

FESTIVAL.—The ice cream festival given at Philharmonic Hall last evening was largely attended by the friends of Rev W C Chattin for whose benefit the affair was arranged A choice vocal and instrumental and social intercourse served to fill in the time most agreeably

IRREGULAR.—Considerable complaint reaches us from various postoffices on the Lower Columbia regarding the irregularity of the mails These complaints are becoming too frequent and investigations are in order Will the officers in authority look into the matter?

CENSUS TAKING.—The county clerk and the assistants of the assessor have been busily engaged for several weeks in taking the census of the county as required by law. The task has been a herculean one and promises to last for some time yet In about two or three weeks more it is expected to have the entire enumeration finished

PASSENGERS.—The exodus from the several points down about the sea coast Portland ward seems to have fairly commenced judging from the number who came up the river yesterday About 140 passengers came up on the Bonita and a large number on the Willamette Chief

DESTRUCTIVE FIRE.—During Tuesday Sorenson & Taylor the well known wood dealers of this city lost about 1 700 cords of wood by fire This wood was piled up at a point on the Willamette about four miles above this city, and will prove a serious loss to this firm

LETTER FROM ILWACO

A young gentleman of this city, writing from Ilwaco under date of the 9th inst, says

Ilwaco is not down on the maps yet but for all that it is a beautiful town site on Baker s Bay and located on the donation claim of F D Holman Esq of Portland For several years there has been a hotel called the Bay View house kept by Mr John Hunter and a postoffice bearing the euphonious name Cutts Why it was so named even the oldest inhabitant cannot say unless for the same reason that the bay received its name because the earlier settlers could not get any bread here But the name will not go down to posterity because already a petition has been forwarded by the residents to have the name changed to Ilwaco

Baker s Bay is a beautiful cove sheltered by the bold Cape Disappointment On this bay was situated the ill fated Lacie City of which now scarcely a vestige remains Heretofore the great drawback to Baker s Bay as a watering place was the lack of a suitable landing place, but this difficulty has now been obviated by the building of a wharf last winter which runs out into the bay nearly 400 feet

The Tahoe now makes daily trips between Astoria and Ilwaco The Bay View House is not two minutes walk from the end of the wharf and is a fine place for tourists Its name is well chosen for from it may be seen at a glance the whole bay Chinook Astoria and Clatsop while in the distance Tillamook lifts high its head and further down the coast can be seen Cape Lookout making a dark blue background to the picture For several weeks the house has been crowded which is not surprising considering the advantages On the table can constantly be found clams tom and rock cod and pogies while Mrs Hunter s deviled crab is so excellent that even the most confirmed grumbler can only vamp up that there is not enough of it In the bay there is an abundance of tom cod and it is indeed rare sport to catch them One day last week three persons caught nearly three hundred in a short time Nor does the hotel monopolize all the good things there to be found for at ready twenty four tents have been pitched by people from Portland and Oregon City and two more on the ocean beach by Dot Fortlanders So that there is quite a village here on Mr Holman s land Mr Holman has put up a large tent made of two immense main sails and every evening it is the rendezvous for all the residents who seated around the roaring fire commiserate the Portlanders who are unable to leave and are being scorched by the heat And we do pity you indeed Here, when a person has been acclimated by a days residence the weather is delightfully cool and in the evening a fire is just the thing you need The beach is covered by drift logs and wood is more abundant than in Portland and is delivered right at your door—if you camp close enough

Fort Canby and the lighthouse are two miles away and can easily be reached by either water or land At the lighthouse Mr Munson and his assistants are always ready to show the wonders of the Fresnel light to visitors From the lighthouse a beautiful view is had far out to sea, and nearer, the shoals and deep water of the once dangerous Columbia river bar Fort Canby is garrisoned by Company H Fourth Artillery under the command of Maj Smith who is assisted by Captain Anderson and Lieutenant Mitcham—all of them as pleasant, social gentlemen as ever commanded a post The parade ground is used also for base ball and were it a little wider would be the best grounds north of San Francisco Saturday there was a match game between the Hancock and the Arcadians The Hancocks played well but the Arcadians did better The score was largely in favor of the Arcadians but would not have been so large if it had not been for some peculiar decisions by the umpire However the Hancocks congratulate themselves that they did as well as they did

The ocean beach is distant about a mile and there is a fine wagon road leading there At low tides here you may find the festive crab and solemn clam Within the past week large numbers of the Portugese men of war have come ashore They belong to one of the lowest families of the radiates The main part of the animal is oblong in shape and dark blue in color Rising above the body is the thin membranaceous sail which is its only means of locomotion. For twenty five miles the beach is as level as a floor and is the only road to Oysterville Hence is the place for surf bathing If quieter bathing is preferred the beach in front of Ilwaco is the place The tide in running out leaves a wide beach which is warmed by the sun, and the returning tide is thus warmed There is a bathing place half a mile long by one hundred yards wide But if you want to be tumbled around generally loose have your mouths filled full of salt water nearly freeze to death, and enjoy all the other luxuries of surf bathing you can have the fullest opportunity at the beach

The rarest sport on the beach is fishing for poggies off the rocks as the tide comes in Providing yourself at low tide with worms found among the muscles on the rocks, having a long pole a stout line with three hooks on it you are ready for fishing You seek out a bold rock, don your oldest clothes, take off your boots and stockings and wait for the surf Presently it comes first the mere ripple of the advanced waves then it comes foaming up the sand finally here it comes charging You wait until the waves settle a little and then cast your line let us hope in pleasant places if so you will haul up at least one fish weighing from half a pound to three or four pounds Of course if you have poor luck or get excited with your good luck and stay too long the waves are liable to dash over you and make you wet for you may have to wade ashore but who cares No one was ever known to catch cold from sea water and the surf is no fraud As times the fish are very plentiful and fifty pounds have been caught with in an hour by one person

In a week or two immense schools of sardines will be here and then the beach will be covered for miles with the fish who are driven ashore by their enemies—the bakes The latter also come ashore and are considered very fine eating

Crabs are also found in the pools of sea water left by the receding tide It is splendid fun to wade into these pools armed with a rake and capture crabs The water is rather cold but the sport more than pays for this inconvenience

NOTICE.—Mr James Quinn late of the Union fish market, would wish to say to any parties having any claims against him to please send them in this morning and parties knowing themselves to be indebted will please call and settle

FROM THE KITCHEN TO THE PALACE

From the Philadelphia Times

Patrick Rafferty is dead Patrick breathed his last away off in one of the southern counties of Ireland Now the death of Patrick didn t startle the civilized world in general one third as much as it did the immediate neighborhood of 3197 Ridge avenue in particular Here resides the famous Dibbs family composed in the main of Mr and Mrs Dibbs and Miss Margaret Rafferty The latter is or rather was until quite recently a domestic in the Dibbs household leading valuable assistance to the members thereof by her long experience with dish washing wash tub washing, frying pan manipulations and the like She had youth on her side and her arm was well developed as the limbs of John Mr Dibbs saw beneath her bronzed features all of her true worth, and when she told him in her simple orphan like style that she was a stranger in a strange land that she hadn t any friends and hadn t any spondoolix his heart was touched for he knew she would be handy about the house and was sure to know how to boil his corn beef and cabbage So Margaret after Mr Dibbs had consulted his wife became one of the family and at once entered upon her household duties This happened three years ago and Saturday last to end the once dejected emigrant alive and kicking in Dibbs kitchen Her face was as bright as a new tin pan and you could see your likeness from a distance of five feet in the glistening beauty of her dark brown eyes Seven o clock had struck and she was just in the act of taking up the potatoes for dinner when Mr Dibbs all aglow with excitement handed Margaret a letter from California It was the first time for many a body the poor girl had ever received and her enthusiasm was so great that she dropped the murphies dish and all Her excitement was beyond control she could not hold the letter steady enough to read it and so asked Mr Dibbs to become her secretary He the kind old gentleman consented and while Margaret sobbed and laughed outright at inconsistent intervals read to her the following astonishing epistle.

SAN FRANCISCO July 10

MY DEAR SISTER I have just received a letter from the parish priest of St Bridget s abbey who informs me that our Uncle Patrick is dead and has left an estate of 50 000 We are his nearest of kin, and consequently as rich as blazes I ll write you again

Hopin this finds you as it leaves me, I remain your darling brother

TIMOTHY RAFFERTY

At the conclusion of Mr Dibbs' reading Margaret didn t faint but sprang to her feet and rushed up stairs vowing that she had cooked the last dinner for the Dibbs family. Mr Dibbs immediately informed his wife of the intelligence and the two worthy people came to the conclusion that to adopt Miss Rafferty would be a humane thing under the circumstances They accordingly adopted her and Miss Margaret feeling somewhat elated over the circumstance resolved to be known henceforth as Miss Margaret Rafferty Dibbs To the Times reporter Miss Margaret wouldn t exhibit herself which refusal of course was Miss Margaret s prerogative while Mr Dibbs looked on the inquisitive individual as he would have done upon the suitor for the young lady s hand He was communicative enough however, to make known the fact that Margaret had five brothers and that the fortune would be divided among the three rather sand Mr Dibbs in other words accordin' to lor

THREE FISHERS.

"Lucum in præsens animus, quod ultra est
Oderit curare, et animum lento
Temperet risu. Nihil est ab omni
Parte beatum."

—Hor. II., xvi.

Three fishers went sowing out into the west,
Out into the west as the sun went down;
Each thought of the woe that the frost love best,
And the number of fish he should bring to town.
They would fish that even ere gloke arose,
And come they would not, and none would keep
For the fishers' breakfast in the morning.

Three fishers sat up till the midnight hour,
By their fire on the bank, where the stream runs down;
They talked of the fish, and their certain power
To take many count with them back to town.
Then with confident hearts they went to sleep,
And dreamed of the rifles and dark pools deep,
Where they'd catch the trout in the morning.

Three fishers set out o'er the shining sands,
In the morning bright, where the stream runs down;
But they came back at even with empty hands,
And never a trout to be carried to town.
Their words were few, but bitter and deep,
Were the feelings they had when they went to sleep,
And arose to go home in the morning.

Three fishers disgusted and covered with dust,
Returned from the west, in the train, to town,
Resolving that never again on trust,
They would go to fish where the sun goes down.
For they had discovered, alas, full well
That you cannot generally always tell
Where the trout will bite in the morning.

HOW HE FELT.

(From the Vicksburg (Miss.) Herald.)

He had a wooden leg; three fingers were gone from the left hand, and he had to use a crutch. In the dusk of evening, he sat down on a drygoods box on the street corner, and, striking the ground with his crutch, he exclaimed:

"Well, old pard, the war's over! Gimme your hand—shake hard!"

He shook the crutch with hearty good will, and continued:

"There's no more Reb—no more Yank! We're all Americans, and standing shoulder to shoulder—South Carolina alongside Massachusetts—we can lick the boots off'n any nation under the sun!"

He waited awhile, and then went on:

"No more skirmishes—no more fouts! Uncle Robert is dead. General Grant wants peace, and they're melting up swords and bayonets to make cotton-mill machinery! We're about through camping out, old pard, and we hain't sorry—not a bit!"

He leaned the crutch against the box, lifted his wooden leg, and said:

"Lost a good leg up at Fredericksburg, when I was under Barksdale, and Burnside thought he could whip old Uncle Robert and Stonewall Jackson together! Good Lord, but wasn't it hot that day, when the Yanks hid their pontoons and got up and got for us! And when we got up and got for them, wasn't it red hot?"

He stopped to ponder for awhile, and his voice was soft as he said:

"But I forgive 'em! I took the chances—and lost. I'm reaching out now to shake hands with the Yank who shot me, and I'll divide my tobacco half and half with him! It was a big war! Yank and Reb stood right up and showed pluck, but it's time to forgive and forget."

He cut a chew off his plug, took off his battered hat and looked at it, and continued:

"Didn't we all come of one blood? Hain't we the big American nation? Isn't this here United States the biggest plantation on the river, and is there a nation in the world that dares knock the chip off our shoulder?

"Maryland, my Maryland,
Michigan, my Michigan."

He put down his leg, looked at his crippled hand, and soliloquized:

"Three fingers gone—hand used up, but I'm satisfied. Folks who go to war expect to feel bullets. We stood up to the Yanks—they stood up to us—it was a fair fout, and we got licked. Two fingers hain't as good as five, but they are good enough to shake hands with! Come up here, you Yanks, and grip me! We raise cotton down here—you raise corn up there—less trade!"

He lifted his crutch, struck it down hard, and went on:

"Durn a family who'll fight each other! We've got the biggest and best country that ever laid out doors, and if any foreign despot throws a club at the American eagle, we'll shoulder arms and shoot him into the middle of next week!"

He sat and pondered while the shadows grew deeper, and by-and-by he said:

"There's lots of graves down here—there's heaps o' war orphans up North; I'm crippled up and half sick, but I'm going to git up and hit the onery fuss who dares say a word ag'in either. We've got through fighting—we're shaking hands now, and durn the man who says a word to interrupt the harmony! It's one family—old Uncle Sam's boys and gals and babies; and we're going to live in the same house, eat at the same table, and turn out better crops than any other ranch on the globe!"

He rose up to go, rapped on the box with his crutch, and continued:

"Resolved that this glorious old family stick right together in the old homestead for the next million years to come!"

THE MISSING BALLOONISTS.

Nothing has been heard as yet from Donaldson and his companion, Grimwood, the report that the latter had landed at South Haven having proved unfounded. The story of the remains of a balloon having been seen in Lake Michigan proved to be a heartless hoax set afloat by a man who should have known better. The general impression at Chicago is that the two adventurers have perished in the lake; but, Professor King, the aeronaut, has not given them up for lost yet; and prints the following, which is published in the Inter-Ocean:

"It is my opinion that Donaldson and Grimwood have reached the woods of Michigan, on the lake shore, and that they will follow the coast in their efforts to extricate themselves. Send a tug to cruise along the shore, as it may be the means of saving them from starvation. Spare no means to save the lives of the men, and believe nothing of the stories told of intentional absence for the purpose of creating a sensation. SAMUEL A. KING, Aeronaut."

Barnum has offered $500 reward to any tug that will find the bodies of the aeronauts. Mr. King, of Cleveland, offers $100 to aid in the search, and the Evening Journal also offers $100 for the same purpose. Vessels which were on the lake during the night of the 10th report that the wind was from the north, blowing hard. It was foggy all the way over. The scow Banner was in the squall of Thursday night, seven miles off Milwaukee. The wind was north-north-west, but veered to northeast, and lasted from 10:15 to 11:15. The rain fell heavily during that time, and the general belief is that the aeronauts perished in the squall.

The unlucky inflation platform of the Ohio Democrats, expressing, as it doubtless does, the opinions of a large majority of the Western Democrats, is clearly the rock upon which the party is destined to founder in the campaign of this and next year. Certain it is that never have the two factions of the Democracy been known to fight each other so vigorously as they do at the present time; and while this internecine conflict continues the Republicans are content to rest their arms and watch the combatants.—New Haven Journal and Courier (Rep.)

During the present week there have been very few important transactions in financial or commercial circles in our home market and business men generally who are not engaging their summer vacation away from home are not actively engaged, except those who are employed in making preparations for the fall trade.

The general financial condition at large, in a financial aspect, is much better than it was a year ago. The report of the Philadelphia mint for the fiscal year just closed shows a very satisfactory state of affairs in that important institution. The total amount of gold operated upon by the melter and refiner during the year was 712,068,276 standard Troy ounces, valued at $13,801,732 1. The amount of wastage in operating on this was 87,003 ounces, valued at $1,648 65, while the legal allowance would be 742,601 ounces, one thousandth of the whole amount, so that the actual loss was only about one-ninth of that allowed by law. There was also operated on 6,387,806.92 ounces of silver, valued at $7,947,501 22, with a wastage of 475.63 ounces, or about one-twentieth of the legal amount. The coiner operated on 686,573.12 standard Troy ounces of gold during the year, valued at $13,011,592.03. This loss was only 19.59 ounces, or about one-seventeenth of his legal wastage. He also operated on 5,999,916.09 ounces of silver, valued at $7,465,768 37, with a loss of 954.49 ounces, or but one-sixth of the wastage allowed by law. This is said to be the best showing that has been made by the old parent mint for the last twenty-five years, and proves with what care the operations are conducted, and the perfection which has been reached in the processes of separating and refining the precious metals.

Trade Matters.

Such is the quietness prevailing in trade circles that any extended notice of transactions or comments on the market are not necessary. Harvesting goods and agricultural merchandise of all classes, in fact, are still in fair request, though the volume of transactions is declining. Groceries, especially leading articles of a staple character, are firm, such as sugar, coffees and salt, but the demand in wholesale and jobbing houses is light. With present circumstances and the settled quiet likely to arise later in the season, prices for such will be quite apt to advance sharply. In the line of dry goods the present condition of the market favors buyers, the prices being down to very low figures on account of an over supply on manufacturers' hands at the East. This state of things, however is not likely to continue beyond the next season of the factories will endeavor hereafter to gauge their production more in proportion to the probable wants of the trade.

In the produce market there are few changes to note; receipts being light on account of the harvesting business engaging the attention of producers throughout the State. Prices are firm for all leading articles of home produce.

Wheat Crops Everywhere.

We are in receipt of the New York Produce Exchange Weekly, of August 1st, which contains very full statistical information concerning the wheat crops in all the grain-producing countries. We make some compilations, the drift of which show that the deficiency of the yield in Europe and that part of the United States east of the Rocky mountains will at least be such as to render probable a brisk demand for the surplus of this coast during the coming summer. The wheat crop of the United States in 1874 was estimated by the agricultural department at 300,000,000 bushels, and its estimate of the wheat crop of 1875 is 82 per cent of that of 1874, or 246,000,000 bushels.

The winter-wheat crop of the United States is about 60 per cent., and the spring wheat crop 40 per cent of the whole.

The surplus of the wheat crop of the United States in 1873 for export in 1874 would probably be very much less than the surplus from the crop of 1874.

The cereal crops in the Canadas, especially wheat and barley, promise a full average.

Clearing weather on the British Isles in the last week of July, after a prolonged stormy period, had caused declining prices in breadstuffs, as well as in France, indicating less damage from the storms and rains than was expected during the prevalence of the storms.

There had been heavy rain falls throughout the Northwestern and Western States, and it was feared that in the winter wheat-producing sections much damage had been done to the wheat on the fields and in the shock.

The wheat crop of France in 1874, as per report of the French minister of agriculture, was 124,000,000 hectolitres. The requirements of France of wheat for alimentary food, seed manufactures and food of animals, is placed at 99,275,490 hectolitres per annum; equal to 231,763,250 bushels of 60 lbs.; 121,000,000 hectolitres is equal to 155,700,000 bushels. With 256,292,156 bushels annual consumption, France had a surplus from the wheat crop of 1874, of 33,724,510 hectolitres, equal to 123,537,741 bushels surplus of crop of 1874 for export or consumption in 1875-6.

The Petersburg Wedomosti, speaking of the crops in South Russia, says: "The situation of the harvest in South Russia is now clear. There are reports from all parts of Podolia and Kieff and from many parts of Besserabia and Chesson, and all very little satisfactory. In nearly all Podolia there is a very bad crop. The north of Besserabia, from 60 wersts west of Odessa, is without hope; there will be hardly any hay, and at present animals are fed with the hay of last year. The first merchants do not dare to sell wheat, believing that in consequence of bad harvests, prices must go up. One large firm keep a stock of 60,000 tschetwerts (or 300,000 bushels)."

Australia, with a larger surplus of wheat than for the crop of 1873, the exports have been 79,650 tons, with something more than 120,000 tons of wheat still left for export.

The cable reports a drouth in the north and south of Portugal, with a threatened famine in two or three provinces.

In Holland the weather has been rainy and boisterous for several days, with but little harm to the growing crops.

According to the Bruager du Gouvernement, the wheat crop in Russia affords the best expectations, notwithstanding the ungenial rain in spring and the violent winds which swept over several districts. The cereal crops present a most excellent appearance in the interior of the country and in the Crimea, as well as in the Polish provinces.

The surplus of Russian wheat for export has been as high as 73,000,000 bushels maximum and 33,000,000 bushels minimum, and the average for ten years has been about 50,000,000 bushels.

Should the reported damage to the Russian crops reduce the supply to the minimum, the Black and Azov Sea ports would not have more surplus than the ports of the Mediterranean usually require to import. The reports as to the Russian crop prospects are contradictory, which is the earlier or later is not stated in advices received and given herein.

At Rostock, Berlin, Stettin, Hamburg and other places, and if the old adage shall be fulfilled, there will be seven weeks of more or less rain. So far the crops in Germany, with few exceptions, promise well. Rye cutting had been commenced on the 16th ult., and, weather permitting, was expected to be general by the 24th ult. According to the German official report of the crops in Germany, it appears that the cereal crops of 1874, in the Prussian monarchy, has been larger than computed last autumn. Wheat was put down officially at 92c, whereas it turned out 10, or 11 per cent greater than was computed. Crops in the north of Germany are boasting satisfactory, and a full acreage was expected with the exception of rye.

Advices from Vienna, Austria, under date of the 13th ult., state that both Hungary and Austria are not expected to have average cereal crops, and after harvest operations had been commenced complaints from day to day were increased, expressing general disappointment from the light weight and deficient yield.

Advices from Paris, France, under date of the 12th instant, state that the agricultural reports that day published were by no means satisfactory; the quantity will, as had been known for some time, be less than last year, and the quality it was feared would be less satisfactory. Rust was developed in very many places, besides in some portions of the south the wheat had sprouted. Rye then partly sat, was also sprouting. Inundations were extended to the valley of the Rhine. Much grain had been laid. Hailstorms and rain caused considerable damage in some of the eastern departments, and in the western departments, especially in the Seine Inferieure and in Calvados, there had been much damage.

The visible supply of wheat in the United States had been materially increased during the last week in July. The shipments of flour and grain from lake ports for the month were 15,557,312 bushels, and the exports from seaboard ports during the same period have been 7,930,244 bushels of all kinds of grain and flour. The stocks in the ten principal ports of the United Kingdom July 1, 1875, were larger than on July 1, 1871. The amount of wheat in transit for the United Kingdom July 1, 1875, was between four and five million bushels more than on July 16, 1874. The amount of wheat in transit between lake ports and the seaboard is about four million bushels.

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 10.—Sailed—Ship Annie M. Small, New York; bk Mark Allison, Barrard Inlet; Bk Bark Cosmo, Portland; schr Norway, Coos Bay.

Home Produce Market.

WHEAT—There is an upward tendency in the market, and buyers to-day quote at $1 95 per central. The Liverpool market is quoted in private telegrams at 11s 3d per central. The receipts here of the new crop are small, and only a few lots have been on the market to-day, and were mostly sold at the highest current rates.

FLOUR—The local market is firm, with a fair demand both for shipment and the home trade. We quote at $5 per bbl for standard extras, $5 50 for good outside and country brands, and $6 for superfine.

OATS—There are not yet any large lots of the new crop in the market, though the supply is ample for the local demand, and shipments are dull. The ruling price last week was 60 cents per bushel, but buyers have reduced their offers somewhat today, and quotations are 50@55½ cents.

MILL FEED—There is not at present any stock in the market, but the demand, which is light, is fairly supplied at $16@17 per ton for bran, and $20 for middlings. Shorts are quotable at $22 50@25.

BARLEY—Prices are unchanged and in the absence of sufficient transactions to establish prices we quote feed at $1 25, and choice brewing $1 40@1 45 per cent.

HAY—There is a full supply of the new crop and prices for good timothy are $10@11 per ton.

HIDE—The market is not in full supply and receipts barely satisfy home trade. We quote fresh Oregon at 20c per lb; firm.

POTATOES—Market becoming better supplied and with a finer quality. The home consumption takes all coming in at from ¾ to 1¼ ₰ lb.

ONIONS—Report from the growing crop is favorable. Quotations from San Francisco continue. Market quotable at from 2@2½c ₰ lb.

FRESH FRUIT—Apples, pears and plums are in free receipt, as are also blackberries. Prices continue as ruling, but that we are unable to give correctly. The range for apples is 7½@8½ ₰ box; plums and pears are the same. Blackberries are from 6 to 8c ₰ lb.

APPLES—Fresh apples were sold to-day at from 50 cents to $1 per box.

DRIED FRUIT—Dried apples are in demand at from 7½@8c ₰ lb. Dried plums are scarce and command 15c ₰ lb.

BACON AND HAMS—Market over-sold. Prices rule low and buyers favor at for bacon, 11@12c ₰ lb; hams, 13@15c ₰ lb; shoulders, 7@8c ₰ lb.

LARD—Importation from San Francisco is free. The market is quiet at from 13 to 15c ₰ lb.

EGGS—Prices dropped 5c per dozen, then recovered and advanced to 20c under an active competition. They are now quoted at 30c per dozen.

BUTTER—Market firmer for best quality in rolls and also in kegs. We quote rolls for fair to choice, 25@35c; kegs, fair to choice, 20@30c, and common, 15@20c. In kegs we quote extra at 22@25c ₰ lb in jobbing lots.

CHICKENS—Old were sold to day as high as $4 50 per dozen.

DUCKS—Demand light with prices lower; quotable at $4@5 per dozen.

BEEF CATTLE—The consumption in this city from July 31, 1874, to August 1, 1875, is given at 4,000 head. Slaughterers' prices are 3½@4c ₰ lb net and 7½@8c on foot.

MUTTON SHEEP—A light demand rules at from $2@2 75 per head.

DRESSED HOGS—Trade dull, at from 6½@6¾c ₰ lb.

HIDES AND FURS—Hides are in a little better demand, but no recovery in prices is given. Furs are more sought for and better prices given. We quote hides, best selected, 14½@15c ₰ lb; culls, 9 off; green, 6c; calf, 18@20c ₰ lb; deer, 18@25c ₰ lb for fall; and 40@75c each green. Mink skins, $1 50 each; otter, $1 @5 each; beaver, 75c@$1.

WOOL—Transactions are a little off at present, though a good deal of the spring wool is yet unsold. The Eastern market has undergone no important fluctuation during a week past. Ours is quotable at 22@25c for choice valley, and 15@18c per lb for Eastern Oregon. Each compiling buyer heard running buyers, because of lots of wool badly packed and not graded.

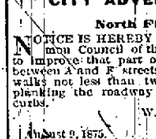
Ayer's Sarsaparilla,

FOR PURIFYING THE BLOOD.



This compound of the Sarsaparilla, Dock, Stillingia and Mandrake with the iodides of Potassium and Iron makes a most effectual cure of a series of complaints which are very prevalent and afflicting. It purifies the blood, purges out the lurking humors in the system, and, by thus eradicating them, health and strength follow. Pimples and blotches on the surface of the skin are the appearance of internal derangements; they are the efforts of nature to throw off the impurities which would, if retained, breed disease in the system. Ayer's Sarsaparilla expels these humors from the blood, and with them the seeds of disease. When they are gone, the disorders they produced disappear also. Scrofula, Erysipelas, Pimples, Pustules, Blotches, Boils, Tumors, Tetter and Salt Rheum, Scald Head, Ringworm, Ulcers, Hip Disease, Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Pains in the Bones, Side and Head, Female weaknesses, Sterility, Leucorrhœa arising from internal ulceration and uterine disease, Dropsy, Dyspepsia, Emaciation and General Debility. With their departure health returns.
